HARDOUIN [HARDUINUS], John.

Born 1646, in Britanny. A Jeſuit, one of the moſt learned but moſt eccentric members of his order. His paradoxes on ancient hiſtory are well known, and had their origin chiefly in the vanity which prompted him to obtain celebrity at any coſt. He endeavoured to prove that the Æneis aſcribed to Virgil, and the odes attributed to Horace, were really compoſed by ſome monks during the middle ages! Hardouin died in 1729. He edited an edition of the Councils to the year 1714, in 12 vol. folio, which is much eſteemed.

HIPPOLYTUS Portuensis, Saint.

An eminent biſhop and martyr of the third century. A diſciple of Irenæus. Origen was one of his ſcholars. Suffered martyrdom about 230. The greater part of his works have periſhed; but thoſe that remain prove that he joined to great learning a convincing ſtyle, grave, conciſe, and ſimple. They have been admirably edited by Fabricius, along with other remains, 1716. A very rare and valuable book. The Philoſophumena recently publiſhed under the name of Origen, is generally attributed to Hippolytus. See Bunsen and Wordsworth (Chriſtopher).

HOOKER, Richard, M.A.

Called "the Judicious." One of the moſt eminent of Engliſh divines. Born at Heavy-Tree, near Exeter, 1554. Entered Corpus Chriſti College, Oxford, 1567, of which he was choſen Scholar and Fellow. Rector of Drayton-Beauchamp, Bucks, 1584. Maſter of the Temple 1585. Rector of Boſcomb, Wiltſhire, and Prebendary of Saliſbury 1591. Rector of Biſhopſbourne, Kent, 1595. Died 1600. His great work on Eccleſiaſtical Polity has been univerſally admired for ſoundneſs of reaſoning, prodigious extent of learning, and a majeſtic ſtyle. The firſt four books were originally publiſhed in folio, 1594. The fifth appeared in 1597, folio. The ſixth, ſeventh, and eighth, were publiſhed poſthumouſly in 1648, 4°., and are ſuppoſed to have been interpolated. The beſt printed folio edition of the whole works is that of 1723. The one edited by Keble is now the beſt, firſt publiſhed 1836, in 4 vol. 8°., and reprinted in a ſmaller type, in 3 vol. 8°., 1841, &c.; alſo, reprinted without Keble's notes and introduction, in 2 vol. 8°. An edition was publiſhed in 1830, 3 vol. 8°., with an introduction, a life of Thomas Cartwright, and numerous notes, [including extracts from the works anſwered by Hooker], by B. Hanbury, a Diſſenter.

Works, arranged by the Rev. John Keble, M.A. Second edit. 3 vol. 8°. Oxf. 1841

HULSEAN LECTURES.

The Rev. John Hulſe, B.A., was born at Middlewich 1708. Educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. Obtained a ſmall curacy in the country; and upon the death of his father in 1753, withdrew to his paternal inheritance in Cheſhire, where, owing to his delicate ſtate of health, he lived in retirement until his death in 1790. He bequeathed eſtates in order to found an annual Prize Eſſay, and the offices of Chriſtian advocate and Chriſtian preacher in the Univerſity of Cambridge. The duties of the Chriſtian preacher, or Hulſean Lecturer, according to his appointment, were to deliver and to print twenty ſermons every year, either upon the evidences of Chriſtianity, or the difficulties of Holy Scripture. The funds being inadequate, the Lectures were not commenced until 1820, and in 1830 the number of ſermons to be delivered in a year was reduced to eight. For further contents, ſee under each author.

IRVINE, Rev. Andrew, B.D.

Sermon, Heb. 4. 14. 8°. Lond. 1830

IRVING, Edward, M.A.

A divine of the Church of Scotland. One of the most eloquent preachers of modern times. Born at Annan, Scotland, 1792. Educated at the University of Edinburgh. Assistant-minister of St. John's, Glasgow, 1819. Minister of the Scotch Church, Cross Street, Hatton Garden, London, 1822; for the congregation of which a large church was erected in Regent Square 1829. Ejected from the Church of Scotland for asserting that Christ took flesh in fallen humanity in order to redeem it; owing to some strong expressions which he used, but the meaning attributed to which he disavowed. Expelled from his charge in 1832, for allowing utterances in the church which he considered to be "manifestations of the Spirit." Died 1834. He was a divine of great intellectual endowments, considerable learning, a rich imagination, sometimes too much for the control of an otherwise sound and discriminating judgment, remarkable simplicity and guilelessness of character, generous, disinterested, and pious.

For the oracles of God, four orations. [On John, 5. 39.] Preparation for consulting the oracles of God. The manner of consulting the oracles of God. The obeying of the oracles of God. For judgment to come, an argument, in nine parts. [On Acts, 17. 30, 31.] Third edition. 8°. Lond. 1824

The last days: a discourse on the evil character of these our times, proving them to be the "perilous times" of the last days. Second edition, with preface by the Rev. Horatius Bonar. Large 12°. Lond. 1850

Originally published in 8°., Lond. 1828.

On 2 Tim. 3. 1–6. Introductory discourse, 1; Lovers of self, covetous, boasters, 36; Proud, blasphemers, 54; Disobedient to parents, 66; Unthankful, 90; Unholy, 112; Without natural affection, 138; Truce-breakers, 155; False accusers, 173; Incontinent, 196; Fierce, 220; Despisers of those that are good, 244; Traitors, 268; Heady, high-minded, 295; Lovers of pleasure more (rather) than lovers of God, 317; Having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof, 344; Discourse recapitulatory, to shew the pharisaical character of the times, 388; Improvement, 439.

A work of power, but not of effort; giving evidence of a gifted mind and an observant eye; containing in it much that belongs to the very highest style both of description and of eloquence, yet nothing elaborate, nothing artificial, nothing ambitious; stamped throughout with irrepressible genius, yet breathing everywhere the spirituality and fervour of the man of God.

Sermons, lectures, and occasional discourses. 3 vol. 8°. Lond. 1828

JACKSON, Thomas, D.D., Dean of Peterborough.

Born at Willowing, Durham, 1579. Admitted of Queen's College, Oxford, 1595. Removed to Corpus Christi 1596. Became Vice-President of his College, and afterwards Vicar of Newcastle. President of his College 1630. Prebendary of Winchester 1633. Dean of Peterborough 1638. Died 1640. Originally a Calvinist, but became Arminian. He was profoundly read in the Fathers, and endued with an uncommon depth of judgment: his works have been admired and studied by many eminent divines; they form a magazine of theological knowledge everywhere penned with great elegance and dignity: yet no works stand more in need of an analysis. In the following analysis, two sets of pagination are given; the first referring to the octavo edition, the second to that in 3 vol. folio, 1673. Southey places him among the very best of our divines. George Herbert says, "I bless God for the confirmation Dr. Jackson has given me in the Christian religion against the Atheist, Jew, and Socinian, and in the Protestant against Rome."

His Auguſtinus, which was the reſult of twenty years' labour, unfolds the doctrine of St. Auguſtine concerning man's natural corruption, and the nature and efficacy of that divine grace which alone can recover it. It was publiſhed poſthumouſly, and was immediately attacked by the Jeſuits, and condemned in 1641 by a Papal bull; and again in 1653, when the famous five propoſitions were extracted from it.

JARCHI, or RASCHI.

In Hebrew writings the name of this author appears under the abbreviations Ra-Sch-J, which the elder Buxtorf erroneouſly read Rabbi Schelomoh Jarchi, inſtead of Jizchaki. Since the time of Buxtorf this error has been retained. Jizchaki was born at Troyes in 1040, and became the founder of the Rabbinical literature of Germany and France. He wrote commentaries to all the Hebrew Scriptures and to half of the Babylonian Talmud. His Biblical expoſitions frequently combine his own Peſhat (plain and ſimple explanation) with quotations from the allegories and traditions of the Rabbins. They have often been tranſlated into Latin. The laſt and beſt tranſlation has been furniſhed by Breithaupt.

JOHNSON, John, M.A., Vicar of Cranbrook.

An eminent and learned divine. Born 1662. Admitted Fellow of St. Mary Magdalen College, Cambridge, 1677–8. Scholar of Corpus Chriſti 1682. Vicar of Boughton-under-the-Blean, and of Hern Hill, 1687. Vicar of St. John, Iſle of Thanet, and of Appledore, 1697. Vicar of Cranbrook, Kent, 1707. Died 1725. In his latter years he became a Nonjuror in principle. His Unbloody Sacrifice is the moſt complete work on the Euchariſt conſidered as a ſacrifice, particularly in the large collection of authorities from the Fathers, which are printed in full. The edition of 1847 (the third of the firſt and ſecond of the ſecond volume) contains the additions made in the ſecond edition of the firſt volume in 1724, which is now extremely rare.

The unbloody ſacrifice and altar unvailed and ſupported; in which the nature of the Euchariſt is explained according to the ſentiments of the Chriſtian Church in the four firſt centuries. 2 vol. 8°.

Iſrael after the fleſh, the Judaiſm of the Bible ſeparated from its ſpiritual religion. 8°. Lond. 1850

The old covenant, 1; Federal inſtitutions, 34; Holineſs, 71; A future ſtate, 105; The faith of Iſrael, 135; Rabbinical errors, 167; The Judaiſm of Jeſus, 207; Chriſtian Jews, 240; Iſrael in the future, 280.

The deſign of this work is to prove that Judaiſm, or the Old Covenant, was excluſively temporal, national, and territorial, confined to the deſcendants of Iſrael, and baſed upon poſſeſſion of Canaan. It was at no time a ſyſtem of individual juſtification; nor had it regard to eternal life. While yet it could not be perfected, without Chriſtianity co-exiſting and co-operating.

JONATHAN Ben Uzziel.

Lived in the days of Chriſt, and was, according to Talmudical tradition, the author of one of the Targumin or Chaldean paraphraſes. The work is extremely intereſting to the biblical ſcholar, as originating from a period when the Hebrew language was ſupplanted by the Aramaic dialect, and when ancient Jewiſh traditions and Scriptural expoſitions were introduced in the paraphraſes which were read during the divine ſervice of the Jews. However, many alluſions to hiſtorical names and events juſtify the concluſion at which modern criticiſm has arrived, that this paraphraſe has been greatly remodelled by various hands, and, in the form in which it has reached us, cannot take its date anterior to the ſecond half of the ſeventh century. (See Zunz gottesdienſtliche Vorträge der Juden, pp. 61–83.) See alſo the article Targum in the preſent work.

JOSEPHUS, Flavius.

The celebrated hiſtorian of the Jews. Born at Jeruſalem about A.D. 37. Joined the ſect of the Phariſees. Taken priſoner after defending Jotapata ſeven weeks. Taken by Veſpaſian and Titus to the ſiege of Jeruſalem, of which he was an eye-witneſs. Died about A.D. 93. He is a writer of great eloquence and penetration. St. Jerome ſtyles him the Greek Livy. Beſt editions of his works, Hudſon, 2 vol. folio, Oxf. 1720. Improved by Havercamp, 1726. Hudſon's is the more elegantly printed edition; a good edition of the Greek text only, edited by Richter, was publiſhed at Leipſic, 1826, 7 vol. 12°. Among the numerous Engliſh tranſlations, that of Whiſton is the beſt, with the exception of the recent tranſlation of the Jewiſh War by Traill, which is greatly ſuperior.

The drunkard's character; or, a true drunkard, with ſuch ſins as reign in him: viz. pride, ignorance, enmity, atheiſm, idleneſs, adultery, murther, with many the like, lively ſet forth in their colours. Together with, Complete armour againſt evil ſociety, the which may ſerve for a common-place book of the moſt uſual ſins. 8°. Lond. 1638

A curious work, dedicated to Bp. Hall, containing very acute and forcible paſſages and deſcriptions.

JUNIUS.

A political writer of extraordinary powers, the varied reſources of which have enabled him, with the peculiar characteriſtic of genius, to dignify and immortaliſe that which in its own nature is ſecondary and periſhable. The real name of the author has not yet been proved, although numerous books have been publiſhed on the ſubject. Above half a century has elapſed ſince he wrote, and his own declaration remains true, "I am the ſole depoſitory of my own ſecret, and it ſhall periſh with me." The ſtandard edition is that publiſhed by the original printer, Woodfall, 1812, 3 vol. 8°. The following is the beſt of recent editions.

Junius; including letters by the ſame writer under other ſignatures: to which are added, his confidential correſpondence with Mr. Wilkes and his private letters to Mr. H. S. Woodfall. A new and enlarged edition; with new evidence as to the authorſhip, and an analyſis by the late Sir Harris Nicolas. By John Wade. 2 vol. Sm. 8°. Lond. 1850

Vol. 1. The entire work as originally publiſhed, with illuſtrative notes.
Vol. 2. The private correſpondence and miſcellaneous letters, and a new eſſay on the authorſhip.

JUNIUS Secundus.

"This youngeſt Junius does not carry the poiſoned dagger of his great prototype, but wears the rapier of a gentleman. The ſtyle is not antithetic and cauſtic like that of the elder Junius,—but flowing, ſparkling, and pungent."

Individual deſpotiſm dangerous to public liberty: a letter of rebuke and admonition addreſſed to Dr. Campbell, editor of the Britiſh Banner; occaſioned by his violent attacks on the diſtributors and the receivers of the Engliſh Regium Donum, on the Weſleyan Methodiſts, and on other religious denominations. Second edition, with copious additions. Pp. i–vi. 76. 8°. Lond. 1849

JUSTINIAN.

The firſt Roman emperor of his name, and celebrated for his code of laws. Succeeded to the imperial throne 527. Died 565, at the age of eighty-three. He collected the Roman laws into one body, having ſelected ten of the moſt able lawyers, who reviſed the Gregorian, Theodoſian, and Hermogenian codes. They were compiled into one body, called The Code. The deciſions of the judges and other magiſtrates, which lay ſcattered in about 2000 vols., after ten years' labour, chiefly by Tribonian, an eminent lawyer, were reduced to the number of fifty, and called Digeſts or Pandects. For the uſe of ſtudents he ordered four books of Inſtitutes to be drawn up by Tribonian, Dorotheus, and Theophilus; and the laws of modern date were put into one volume, called Novellæ or New Code. The whole are now publiſhed under the general title of Corpus Juris Civilis. The editions with Gothofredus's notes are much eſteemed.

The journal of sacred literature; edited by John Kitto, D.D., F.S.A. 7 vol. 8°. New series, 4 vol. In all 11 vol. 8°. Lond. 1848–53

This journal supplies a want, which had been long felt, of a periodical entirely devoted to biblical literature, and on so wide a basis as to embrace the contributions of different denominations and of different countries. Its aim is to furnish the students and readers of biblical literature with an organ for the discussion of all the subjects in which they are interested, and for the interchange of their views upon questions of equal importance to them all. It forms a repository of the best results of the active biblical research of the present age; by reviews, intelligence, and correspondence, it furnishes a library of original and translated dissertations and essays of permanent value.

Vol. 1.

Hiſtory of the Turks, before the riſing of the Othoman family, with all the noble expeditions of the Chriſtian princes againſt them.

Hiſtory of the Turks, from Othoman, firſt founder of the Othoman empire, to A.D. 1604.

Vol. 2. 1687. Sixth edition.

A.D. 1604—1620.

Continuation, 1620—1623, by M.B.

From 1623 to 1677, by Sir Paul Rycaut.

The preſent ſtate of the Ottoman empire, containing the maxims of the Turkiſh polity; the moſt material points of the Mahometan religion; their ſects and hereſies; their convents and religious votaries; their military diſcipline, with an exact computation of their forces by ſea and land.

Index to Knowles's hiſtory. Index to Rycaut's continuation.

Vol. 3. 1700.

The hiſtory of the Turks, beginning with the year 1679, being a full relation of the laſt troubles in Hungary, with the ſieges of Vienna and Buda, and all the ſeveral battles both by ſea and land, between the Chriſtians and the Turks, until the end of the year 1698 and 1699.

KNOX, John.

The chief inſtrument and promoter of the Reformation in Scotland. Born at Gifford, in Eaſt Lothian, 1505. Educated at the Grammar-ſchool, Haddington, and at the Univerſity of St. Andrews. After receiving prieſt's orders he adopted the principles of the Reformation, and became tutor in the family of Hugh Douglas, of Long-Niddrie, and catechiſed publicly in the chapel there. Preacher at St. Andrews 1547. Carried priſoner to France. Set at liberty and went to England 1549. Appointed Preacher, firſt at Berwick, and next at Newcaſtle. Chaplain to Edward VI. 1552. Fled to Geneva at the acceſſion of Queen Mary. Returned to Scotland 1555. Died 1572. The firſt edition of his Hiſtory of the Reformation, printed at Edinburgh 1584, is exceedingly rare, and only to be found in an imperfect ſtate. A good edition was publiſhed by Ruddiman in 1732, folio; but it has been edited in a much more complete and correct manner by David Laing, Eſq., 2 vol. 8°., 1846–48. This is to be followed by a complete and accurate collection of the other works of the Reformer.

Works; collected and edited by David Laing. Vol. 1 and 2 being all yet publiſhed. 8°. Edin. 1846, &c.

Novi Teſtamenti libri hiſtorici, Græce, textui recepto appoſitæ ſunt lectiones Grieſbachianæ cum commentariis. 3 vol. 8°. Lond. 1835

Vol. 1. Matth. Marc.
Vol. 2. Luc. Joan.
Vol. 3. Acta Apoſtolorum.

One of the beſt philological commentaries on the hiſtorical books of the New Teſtament. Much labour and care have been beſtowed by the author on the connexion and ſcope of diſcourſe, as well as on the interpretation of words and phraſes. The above reprint is preferable to the German edition, as it it better printed, and contains the Greek text.

LAPIDE, Cornelius à.

A learned and pious Jeſuit. Born in the dioceſe of Liege. Profeſſor of Hebrew during twenty years at Louvain. Afterwards he gave lectures on the Holy Scriptures at Rome for many years, in which he particularly attended to the literal ſenſe. Died 1637. His commentaries do not include Job, or the Pſalms. They are held in great eſtimation by the learned. He inveſtigates with much ability the literal, hiſtorical, grammatical, allegorical, moral, and analogical ſenſe of the ſacred writers. He was well converſant with the Hebrew and Greek languages, and with the commentators that had preceded him. Many editions have been printed of his commentaries, as well in ſeparate volumes, as uniformly. A new edition in 11 vol. 4°. has recently been publiſhed at Lyons.

LARDNER, Nathaniel, D.D.

A Unitarian miniſter of great learning. Born at Hawkhurſt, Kent, 1684. Educated in London, and ſtudied at Utrecht and Leyden. Aſſiſtant-miniſter at Crutched Friars 1729. Died 1768. "In the applauſe of Dr. Lardner all parties of Chriſtians are united, regarding him as the champion of their common and holy faith. Secker, Porteus, Watſon, Tomline, Jortin, Hey, and Paley, of the Anglican Church; Doddridge, Kippis, and Prieſtley, amongſt the Diſſenters; and all foreign Proteſtant biblical critics, have rendered public homage to his learning, his fairneſs, and his great merits as a Chriſtian apologiſt. The candid of the literati of the Romiſh communion have extolled his labours; and even Morgan and Gibbon, profeſſed unbelievers, have awarded to him the mead of faithfulneſs and impartiality. By collecting a maſs of ſcattered evidences in favour of the authenticity of the evangelical hiſtory, he eſtabliſhed a bulwark on the ſide of truth which infidelity has never preſumed to attack."—The Rev. T. H. Horne.

LAUNOY, John de.

Doctor of Sorbonne. Born 1603, in Normandy. One of the moſt learned men of his age. He was appointed in 1643 Cenſor of Books by Chancellor Seguier, but his love of truth ſoon induced him to reſign that poſt. When the doctrines of Janſenius were cenſured by the Sorbonne, Launoy gave his opinion in ſuch a manner that "he proved himſelf," ſays Boſſuet, "both a Semi-Pelagian and a Janſeniſt." Launoy's works are extremely intereſting, eſpecially his correſpondence. He died in 1678.

Opera omnia, ad ſelectum ordinem revocata. Ineditis opuſculis aliquot, notis nonnullis dogmaticis, hiſtoricis et criticis, auctoris vita, variis monumentis tum ad Launoium tum ad ſcripta ipſius pertinentibus, præfationibus cuique volumini affixis, indicibus locupletiſſimis, aucta et illuſtrata; acceſſit tractatus de varia Launoii librorum fortuna. 5 vol. in 10. LAW, William, A.M.

A pious and able Nonjuror. Born at Kingſcliffe, Northamptonſhire, 1686. Entered of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 1705. Elected Fellow 1711. This he vacated in 1716, having refuſed to take the oaths on the acceſſion of George I. Died 1761. His works, eſpecially his three Letters to Hoadly, contain the fineſt ſpecimens of controverſial writing in our language for ſtyle, wit, and argument. Gibbon has happily deſcribed his practical works in the following ſentence: "Law's precepts are rigid, but they are founded on the goſpel; his ſatire is ſharp, but is drawn from the knowledge of human life; and many of his portraits are not unworthy the pen of La Bruyère." Dr. Johnſon ſaid, that his Serious Call contained the fineſt hortatory theology in any language. Law was deeply read in the Myſtic divinity, and ſome of his works are powerfully written in that ſtrain. A collection of his works was made in 1762, 9 vol. 8°., but it has now become very ſcarce. It does not include two ſermons which he publiſhed ſeparately, nor a ſmall tract entitled, Letters to a Lady inclined to enter the Communion of the Church of Rome.

LE CLERC [CLERICUS], John.

A celebrated Proteſtant writer, and univerſal ſcholar. Born at Geneva 1657. Studied divinity under Meſtrezat and Turretin. Ordained 1679. Renounced Calviniſm, became a zealous Arminian, and was appointed Lecturer in the college belonging to the Remonſtrants at Amſterdam. Died 1736. His learning was profound, his reading immenſe, and his genius fertile. His work on the Holy Scriptures, particularly that part on the Pentateuch, is full of learned and ingenious criticiſm. He edited Eraſmi opera, Cotelerii Patres Apoſtolici, Grotius de Veritate, Rymeri Fœdera, and other works. The reviews of books in his Bibliothèques are, perhaps, more complete, and more accurate, than thoſe in the Nouvelles de la République des Lettres. They are interſperſed with eſſays on different ſubjects, relating to divinity, ſacred criticiſm, hiſtory, and moral philoſophy. An eminent French critic calls Le Clerc "le ſecond et très eſtimable journaliſte après Bayle."

LEIGHTON, Robert, D.D., Archbiſhop of Glaſgow.

Born in London 1613. Educated at the Univerſity of Edinburgh. Miniſter of Newbattle, near Edinburgh, 1643. Became Principal of the Univerſity of Edinburgh, which he held ten years. Biſhop of Dunblane about 1662. Archbiſhop of Glaſgow, 1670. Reſigned 1674. Retired to Broadhurſt, Suſſex. Died in London 1684. He is celebrated as a ſtriking example of unfeigned piety, extenſive learning, and unbounded liberality. "He had," ſays Bp. Burnet, "a ſublime ſtrain in preaching, with ſo grave a geſture, and ſuch a majeſty both of thought, of language, and of pronunciation, that I never once ſaw a wandering eye where he preached, and have ſeen whole aſſemblies often melt in tears before him." His expoſition of St. Peter is rich in evangelical ſentiment and exalted devotion, the meaning is admirably illuſtrated; there is learning without its parade, theology diveſted of ſyſtematic ſtiffneſs, and eloquence in a beautiful flow of unaffected language and appropriate imagery. The beſt edition of his works is by Pearſon, 4 vol. 8°. and in a ſmaller type, 2 vol. 8°.

LEO the Great, Saint.

One of the moſt eminent of the popes. Born at Rome. Elected Pope 440. He condemned the Manichæans in a council at Rome 444, and extirpated the remains of Pelagianiſm in Italy. He perſuaded, by his eloquence, Attila, king of the Huns, from attacking Rome; and when Genſeric took that city in 445, he prevailed with him not to ſet fire to it. Died 461. He was a ſtrict obſerver of eccleſiaſtical diſcipline. Beſt edition of his works 1753 at Venice.

LINGARD, John, D.D., LL.D.

An eminent Roman Catholic hiſtorian. Born at Wincheſter 1769. Studied at Douay. Returned to England, and took up his reſidence at Hornby, near Lancaſter, where he devoted himſelf to a life of ſtudy and ſecluſion. At one time he was offered a cardinal's hat, which he refuſed. Died at Hornby 1851. His Hiſtory of England is the compoſition of an able writer, who has opened fields of inquiry hitherto unexplored. It has given a new and often correct turn to facts of moment and will continue to be read and ſtudied as the Romaniſt verſion of important events, told with calmneſs, in a ſimple, forcible, unaffected ſtyle, and by one who poſſeſſed in a very remarkable degree the power of condenſation and abridgement.

A larger confutation of Bp. Hare's system of Hebrew metre; in a letter to the Rev. Dr. Edwards, in answer to his Latin epistle - - - - - 375
Poems - - - - - - - - - 443

The authenticity of the ten sermons first published in this volume has been called in question, and in a subsequent publication the editor admits that they appear to have been committed to writing by some of Bishop Lowth's hearers from his preaching. See Harmony of Confessions, 8°., 1844, Introd. xxviii.

A letter to the right reverend author of The Divine Legation of Moses demonstrated [Warburton], in answer to the appendix to the fifth volume of that work. With an appendix containing a former literary correspondence, by a late Professor in the University of Oxford [Lowth]. Second edition. 8°. Lond. 1766

Few pamphlets of the controversial kind were ever written with more ability, or more deeply interested the public than this; although there is too much tendency in it to personal satire.

LUPUS, Servatus, Ferrarienſis.

The moſt elegant writer that France produced in the ninth century. Born about 805. Devoted himſelf early, as a monk, in the Abbey of Ferriers, of which he became Abbot in 842. Died probably before 862. His letters are written with ſolidity, correctneſs, and elegance, and throw conſiderable light on the hiſtory of the period in which he lived. His book of the Three Queſtions (free-will, predeſtination, and redemption by the blood of Chriſt) was written againſt Godeſchalc.

Opera, Stephanus Baluzius in unum collegit, notiſque illuſtravit. 8°. Par. 1664

A learned divine inclined to Socinianiſm. Born at Sandwich, Kent. Entered the Univerſity of Oxford 1606–7, aged ſeventeen. Prebendary of Saliſbury 1631. Rector of Burnham-Weſtgate, Norfolk, 1632. Deprived during the Commonwealth. Reinſtated at the Reſtoration. Died 1661.

The expiation of a ſinner in a commentary upon the Epiſtle to the Hebrews. [Anon.] Folio. Lond. 1646

This work was ſeverely animadverted upon by R. Porter, in his book entitled, God Incarnate, 1655, as Socinian. It is ſaid to be a tranſlation from the Latin of Crellius, with alterations and additions.

A commentary on the Epiſtle to the Galathians. Folio. Lond. 1650*

This alſo is a tranſlation from Crellius.

The reſurrection of our Saviour vindicated, and the ſoldiers' calumnies againſt it fully anſwered, in a ſermon, [Matt. 28. 13], preached at St. Mary's, Oxford. Formerly printed under the feigned name of Robert Jones, D.D. And now publiſhed with a preface diſcovering the true reaſons which drew upon him the cenſure of the Univerſity. By the Right Hon. A hiſtory of the life of the apoſtle Paul. To which are added, Proofs and illuſtrations.
Indexes.

This luminous and valuable work was the unremitting labour of nearly thirty years of the author's life; it contains an ample ſtorehouſe of obſervations to exerciſe not only the ſtudent, but the adept of divinity. The prefaces to the epiſtles, and the view and illuſtration of the facts and arguments are generally admirable. The commentary is in the form of a paraphraſe; the notes diſcover very conſiderable acquaintance with ſacred criticiſm.

The editions in 4 vol. 4°. 1795, and 6 vol. 8°. 1806, &c., contain the original Greek text printed parallel with the tranſlation.

MAGDEBURG CENTURIES.

A celebrated Lutheran ecclesiastical history, so called from having been commenced in the city of Magdeburg and divided into centuries. The writers were Matthew Flaccius Illyricus, John Wigandus, Matthew Judex, and Basil Faber. Each century is divided into sixteen chapters, as follows: 1. A tabular view of the whole century; 2. The progressive enlargement of the Church; 3. The persecutions or tranquillity of the Church and the punishment of persecutors; 4. The doctrine of the Church; 5. Errors and heresies; 6. Rites and ceremonies; 7. Government of the Church, in which are included accounts of libraries, schools, power of magistrates, discipline, popes; 8. Schisms; 9. Councils held; 10. Lives of bishops and doctors; 11. Heretics; 12. Martyrs; 13. Miracles and prodigies; 14. The state of the Jews; 15. State of religion without the Church; 16. Political changes in the empire. Mosheim pronounces it "that immortal work, which restored to the light of evidence and truth the facts relating to the rise and progress of the Christian Church, which had been covered with thick darkness and corrupted by innumerable fables." The celebrated Annals of Baronius were undertaken in order to counteract the influence of this history. The work does not reach beyond the thirteenth century. The best edition is the original one of 1559 and following years, in 13 vol., each century making a volume, but generally bound in 8. The reprint in 3 vol. folio, Basil. 1624, was altered by the editor, Ludovicus Lucius, by various omissions and interpolations in order to make it more acceptable to the reformed who were not of the school of Luther.

Ecclesiastica historia, integram ecclesiæ Christi ideam, quantum ad locum, propagationem, persecutionem, tranquillitatem, doctrinam, hæreses, ceremonias, gubernationem, schismata, synodos, personas, miracula, martyria, religiones extra ecclesiam, et statum imperii politicum attinet, secundum singulas centurias, perspicuo ordine complectens: singulari diligentia et fide ex vetustissimis et optimis historicis, patribus, et aliis scriptoribus congesta: per aliquot studiosos et pios viros in urbe Magdeburgica. 8 vol. Folio. Basil. 1559–74

MAIMBOURG, Louis.

Born at Nancy 1620 ; died 1686. A Jeſuit hiſtorian and controvertiſt. Having taken the defence of the liberties of the Gallican Church in one of his works, he was obliged to retire from the religious ſociety to which he belonged. The King of France rewarded him with a penſion. Maimbourg, as a writer, is far from being truthful ; but his ſtyle is very agreeable, and his deſcriptions are intereſting. The Hiſtory of the Cruſades is conſidered to be his beſt work. A complete liſt of his works is given by Joly in his Rémarques ſur le Dictionnaire de Bayle.

MAIMONIDES, Moses, or Moſes the ſon of Maimūn.

The moſt celebrated of the Rabbins, of whom the Jews have a ſaying, "From Moſes to Moſes there was none like Moſes." Born of an illuſtrious family at Cordova, in Spain, 1135. Having been compelled to embrace Mahomedaniſm, he fled to Egypt, where he returned to his former religion. He became Phyſician to Saladin, and died at the age of ſeventy. The moſt famous among his numerous works are,—A Commentary on the Miſchnah (See Mischnah), Miſchneh Torah (Repetition of the Law), or Jad Chazakah (The Strong Hand), A digeſt of the Talmud (See Talmud).

MALEBRANCHE, Nicolas.

Born at Paris 1638; died 1715. This celebrated philoſopher belonged to the Oratory of St. Philip Neri. After having in vain tried to ſtudy eccleſiaſtical hiſtory and the Oriental languages, the peruſal of one of Deſcartes's works led him to write on metaphyſics. Received, in 1699, a member of the French Académie des Sciences. His views on the doctrines of grace were ſharply criticiſed by Arnauld.

MANTON, Thomas, D.D.

One of the moſt eminent of the Nonconformiſt divines. Born at Lawrence Lydiard, Somerſetſhire, 1620. Entered of Wadham College, Oxford, 1635. Removed to Hart Hall 1639. Admitted to deacon's orders by Biſhop Hall, but took no further orders in the Church. Preſented to the living of Stoke Newington 1643. Rector of St. Paul's, Covent Garden, 1650. Received epiſcopal inſtitution 1661. Reſigned 1662, on account of the Act of Conformity. Died 1677. He was a man of great learning and extenſive reading, of a ſound judgment, and had the art of reducing volumes of divinity into a narrow compaſs. According to Charnock, he was the beſt collector of ſenſe of the age. Dr. Bates ſays, "A clear judgment, rich fancy, ſtrong memory, and happy elocution, met in him, and were ex-

MARSHALL, Stephen, B.D.

A celebrated Commonwealth divine. Born at Godmanchester, and educated at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Became miniſter at Wethersfield, and afterwards preſented to the living of Finchingfield, Eſſex, but was ſilenced for nonconformity. Lecturer at St. Margaret's Church, Weſtminſter, 1640. He was a leader in the Aſſembly of Divines 1643. Died 1655. He was a principal promoter of the rebellion, a frequent and admired preacher before Parliament.

A peace-offering to God: a ſermon on Pſa. 124. 6–8. [Thankſgiving for peace between England and Scotland.] 4°. Lond. 1641

The ſong of Moſes the ſervant of God, and the ſong of the Lambe: opened. A ſermon before the Houſe of Commons. Thankſgiving. [On Rev. 15. 3, 4.] 4°. Lond. 1643

A copy of a letter, to a friend of his in the City, for the neceſſary vindication of himſelf and his miniſtry, againſt that altogether groundleſſe, moſt unjuſt and ungodly aſperſion caſt upon him by certaine malignants in the City, and lately printed at Oxford, in their Mendacium Aulicum, otherwiſe called Mercurius Aulicus, and ſent abroad into other nations to his perpetuall infamy. In which letter the accuſation is fully anſwered. And together with that, the lawfulneſſe of the Parliament taking up defenſive arms is briefly and learnedly aſſerted and demonſtrated, texts of Scripture cleared, all objections to the contrary anſwered, to the full ſatisfaction of all thoſe that deſire to have their conſciences informed in this great controverſie. Pp. 30. 4°. Lond. 1643

MASSILLON, John Baptist.

A member of the Oratory, and one of the moſt eminent of French preachers. Born in Provence 1663. After having been engaged in tuition in the ſouth of France, he preached for the firſt time in Paris in 1699, and ſoon obtained great fame. During the Advent of the ſame year, he delivered a courſe of ſermons at Verſailles before the Court. In 1715, he pronounced the funeral oration of Louis XIV., one of his maſter-pieces. In 1717 he was conſecrated Biſhop of Clermont. In 1719 he entered the French Academy. Died 1742. He has been ſurnamed the Racine of the pulpit and the Cicero of France. His characteriſtics as a preacher are tenderneſs and a ſoft and inſinuating eloquence. "Maſſillon," ſays La Harpe, "riſes above all the preachers that ever preceded or that have ever followed him in the number, variety, and excellence of his productions. A charming flow of uninterrupted elocution, an enchanting harmony, a choice of words which reach the heart, or ſpeak to the imagination; an union of ſtrength and ſweetneſs, of dignity and grace, of ſeverity and unction; an inexhauſtible variety of methods—all tend to ſet off each other; a ſurpriſing richneſs of thought, an art of penetrating into the moſt ſecret receſſes of the human heart, ſo as to aſtoniſh and confound it." D'Alembert calls the Petit Carême a model of true pulpit eloquence. That collection and the ſermons on the Deity of Chriſt and on Lukewarmneſs are greatly admired. The edition of his ſermons (or works) printed at Paris, 1745–49, 15 vol. 12°., is much eſteemed, as it was ſuperintended by the author's nephew, and corrected according to the original manuſcripts. Numerous editions have been printed from it in 15 vol. 12°., 13 vol. 8°., 14 vol. 8°., 3 vol. 8°., and 2 vol. large 8°. In ſome modern editions the Penſées have been omitted.

MAYDESTONE, Clemens.

De martyrio Ric. Scrope.

Wharton, Anglia Sacra, 2. 369

MAYER, John, D.D.

A learned, able, and laborious divine of the Church of England, of whom no memorials have been diſcovered. It may be gathered from his prefaces that he laboured under infirm health, which had incapacitated him for public duty as a clergyman for twenty years before 1631, at which time he was Miniſter at Reydon in Suffolk. In this charge he does not appear to have continued long. He was living in 1653. His Commentary forms a moſt excellent digeſt of all the commentators that had preceded him. Their names are attached to each annotation. To theſe are added his own notes. The work is of very great rarity when complete. It is, perhaps, ſtill the moſt full and ſatisfactory commentary in the Engliſh language.

A commentary upon the whole Old and New Teſtament; wherein the divers tranſlations and expoſitions, literal and myſtical, of all the famous commentators, both ancient and modern, are propounded, examined, and judged of, for the full ſatisfaction of the ſtudious reader, and many moſt genuine notions inſerted for edification in the grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. 6 vol. folio, and 1 vol. 4°. Lond. 1653, &c.

[Vol. 1.] 1653. The Pentateuch.
[Vol. 2.] 1647. The hiſtorical books.
[Vol. 3.] 1653. Job, Pſalms, Prov., Eccl., and Sol. Song.
[Vol. 4.] 1652. The Prophets.
[Vol. 5.] 1631. The Evangeliſts and Acts.
[Vol. 6.] 1631. The Epiſtles of St. Paul.
[Vol. 7.] 1631. 4°. A commentarie upon the ſeven ſmall epiſtles called catholike, and the Booke of the Revelation.

This laſt volume has not been publiſhed in folio.

The Engliſh Catechiſm explained; or, a commentary on the Short Catechiſm ſet forth in the Book of Common Prayer: wherein divers neceſſary queſtions touching the Chriſtian faith are inſerted, modern controverſies handled, doubts reſolved, and many caſes of conſcience cleared. Fourth edition, reviewed. 4°. Lond. 1630

MEDE, Joseph, B.D.

A pious and profoundly learned divine. Born at Berden, Eſſex, 1586. Entered of Chriſt's College, Cambridge, of which he became a Fellow and Tutor, and was appointed Reader of Greek, which office he held during the remainder of his life. Died 1638. His works contain much elaborate expoſition and a great variety of learned and ingenious criticiſm. Mede is univerſally allowed to have led the way to a correct and rational interpretation of the prophecies of Scripture. "A ſublime genius aroſe," ſays Biſhop Hurd, "in the beginning of the laſt century, and ſurpriſed the learned world with that great deſideratum — a key to the Revelation." In the ſecond edition of his works, publiſhed in 1664, much additional matter was introduced from the author's MSS., by Dr. Worthington. The third, publiſhed in 1672, has the reputation of being the beſt; but that it is ſo may be doubted, for Dr. Worthington only ſuperintended the one publiſhed in 1664, as he died in 1671. That of 1672 is a reprint of 1664, with the following variations: ſome of the diſcourſes in Book 1 are divided into two, as noted below; the diſcourſes on Joel,

MERRICK, James, M.A.

A poet, divine, and eminent ſcholar. Born 1720. Entered at Trinity College, Oxford, 1736. Choſen Probationer Fellow 1744. Entered into orders, but owing to illneſs never engaged in parochial duty. Died 1769. Bp. Lowth characteriſed him as "one of the beſt of men and moſt eminent of ſcholars." His verſion of the Pſalms is the moſt poetical in the Engliſh language; and although too much ſo for public worſhip, is highly gratifying for private uſe to perſons of cultivated taſte.

The Pſalms tranſlated; or, paraphraſed in Engliſh verſe. Second edit. 12°. Reading, 1766

Annotations on the Pſalms. 4°. Reading, 1768

This work has become exceedingly ſcarce. It includes Annotations by Bp. Lowth and Abp. Secker, and contains a great deal of elegant criticiſm.

MICHAEL CERULARIUS.

Created Patriarch of Conſtantinople 1043. He was a determined enemy to the Church of Rome, and, in 1053, revived the famous conteſt between the Greek and Latin Churches, by a letter in which he accuſed the Latins of various errors. To this Leo IX. wrote a moſt imperious reply, and aſſembled a council at Rome, in which the Greek Churches were ſolemnly excommunicated.

MILTON, John.

The moſt illuſtrious of Engliſh poets. Born in London 1608. Educated at St. Paul's School, whence he was removed to Chriſt's College, Cambridge, 1625. Travelled abroad 1638. On his return became a ſchoolmaſter in London. During the Commonwealth he was appointed Latin ſecretary to Cromwell. Died 1674. The principal editions of his poetical works are:—By Biſhop Newton, with notes of various authors, 3 vol. 4°., 1749–52, and 4 vol. 8°., 1753, and other dates. By the Rev. H. J. Todd, 7 vol. 8°., 1809, and (without the verbal index) 6 vol. 8°., 1826. By Sir E. Bridges, 6 vol. ſm. 8°., 1835. His proſe works were firſt publiſhed by Toland, 3 vol. folio, Amſt. 1697–8; but, through error or ignorance, ſome of Milton's tracts were printed from firſt editions, although afterwards they had been republiſhed with conſiderable additions. Reprinted 2 vol. folio, 1738,—a very incorrect edition. With life by Birch, 2 vol. 4°., 1753,—very correct. By Symmond, 7 vol. 8°., 1806. In 1 vol. imperial 8°., 1837; 5 vol. ſm. 8°., 1848–53; and with the poetical works, 8 vol. 8°., 1851,—a moſt beautiful and correct edition.

MISCHNA.

Miſchnah (that is, repetition, namely, of the law). This name is given to the compilation of Rabbinical laws which appears to have been commenced by Hillel, about thirty years before Chriſt. The preſent extent and arrangement of the Miſchnah is the work of R. Jehudah Hanaſi (i. e. the prince), A.D. 219, and his diſciples. The Miſchnah conſiſts of ſix ſedarim, or parts. Each ſeder (part) is divided into perakim, or ſections, and each perek, or ſection, is compoſed of a number of ſhort paragraphs, containing the dicta of the Rabbins, each paragraph bearing the name of Miſchnah. The Miſchnah forms the text of the Gemara, i. e. complement or body of Jewiſh theology. (See TALMUD.) Among the moſt celebrated commentaries on the Miſchnah may be mentioned thoſe of Raſchi (ſee ante JARCHI), Maimonides, and Obadiah di Bertinoro. One or more of the works of thoſe rabbins are generally added to the editions of the Miſchnah and the Talmud.

The Miſchnah, with the commentary of Bertinoro; the Toſſephoth, or additions, of Jom Tob; and the Toſſephoth Chadaſchim, or new additions. In Hebrew. 6 vol. 4°.

MOLINOS, Michael de.

Founder of the ſect of Quietiſts. Born in the dioceſe of Saragoſa, in Spain, 1627. Reſided moſtly at Rome, where his ardent piety and devotion procured him a conſiderable number of diſciples. On account of his myſtical opinions he was impriſoned by the Inquiſition 1685. Died in priſon 1696. He held that religion conſiſts in the perfect tranquillity of a mind removed from all external and finite things, and centred in God. Madame Guion was one of his diſciples.
